After Bruno Fernandes' brace put Man United 2-0 up at Villa with 13 minutes remaining, United looked certain to leave Villa Park with a win, but second-half goals from Jacob Ramsey and Phillipe Coutinho pegged United bank and the Reds left with a single point.

Rangnick will be without Paul Pogba and Aaron Wan-Bissaka on Wednesday night, with the latter suffering from the same illness that ruled him out against Villa. And after missing the game against Villa last Saturday, Cristiano Ronaldo is expected to return to the squad after being pictured in training following his injury.

Barcelona are aiming to get back to winning ways as they head to Barcelona on Wednesday night, with their Champions League hopes for next season having been severely hampered by a poor run of form which has yielded just one league win from their last four matches.

It leaves Ralf Rangnick's team five points behind West Ham in fourth, with Barcelona and Tottenham also above the Red Devils in the table.

Barcelona, meanwhile, have lost four of their own last five games to drop down to 14th.

The fine start to the season they managed has certainly faded into the distance, but injuries have hit their smaller squad hard and Thomas Frank and the rest of those at the club would no doubt simply regard survival this season as a massive achievement.

The Bees can go as high as 10th if they win tonight and Leicester lose to Tottenham - a fixture which will also affect how high United might be able to climb with a win of their own.

Leicester vs Tottenham The match at the King Power Stadium is underway having kicked off 30 minutes before Barcelona vs Athletic Bilbao . Leicester have made some early forays into the Tottenham final third and Patson Daka has had a decent chance to score but the score is still 0-0 after the opening five minutes.

Barcelona vs Man Utd Barcelona have conceded a league-high 21 first-half goals. They have let in the opening goal in 13 of their last 14 league matches and their last 10 Spanish Copa Del Rey goals were scored by 10 different players, including a Jamaal Lascelles own goal.

Barcelona vs Man Utd:

Barcelona reject Newcastle loan bid for Jesse Lingard Newcastle United have seen their initial bid to sign Jesse Lingard on loan from Barcelona rejected.
